SUBJECT : Orientation on the Data Collection Methodology for the Study titled "The Impact of Migration on Educational Outcomes of Children Left Behind"

DATE : 04 February 2022

The International Labor Organization (ILO) and Innovations for Poverty Action (IPA), in partnership and coordination with the Department of Education (DepEd), are supporting a study proposed by Mr. Siu Yuat Wong, a PhD researcher in the Department of Economics of Yale University, titled "The Impact of Migration on Educational Outcomes of Children Left Behind". This study aims to understand the impact of temporary migration of parents on the academic outcomes of their children who are left behind. This will provide us evidence on how to further support our Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs) and their families.

As part of its data gathering, the study requires learner data that will be manually collected through the School Forms available at the school level. For clear coordination between DepEd and the researchers, the assistance of the Regional Research Coordinators and SDO SEPS for Planning and Research is hereby requested. In line with this, there will be an orientation on the data collection methodology by cluster on February 17 - 18, 2022 via MS Teams (See Annex 1 for the schedule of each cluster). The orientation aims to present the background of the study, data collection method, and coordination strategy with the RO and SDO. Attached is the schedule of orientation for each region, for your reference.
